STATES BANK

It has been asserted by the opponents of the Bank of the United States (and too often without contradiction,) that the late Ex President Madison never acknowledged the constitutionality of that institution. To correct the erroneous impression thus created on the minds of many friends of the Barch, we publish the fol helieve within hearing of the lamentations and lowing extract of a letter from Mr. Madison to the shricks of his afflicted wife and children. and go-ahead-ed ness in land speculation, think lowing extract of a letter from Mr. Madison to of taking the Morida War in shares, on contract, Charles J. The state of parties in Penn. they expressed, though without attention, in according to the Philadelphia papers will stand the views of the President, as to a Bank of the United States, and a substitute for it; to which I cannot but adhere. The objections to the latter have appeared to me to predominate greatly over the silvantages expected from it, and the CONSTITUTIONALITY of the former I still regard as sustained by the considerations to which I yielded, in giving my assent to the ex-isting bank. JAMES MADISON

Mr. INGERSOLE:

The following is an extract from the message of Mr. Madison, to Congress, on his returning known that the individual addressed was the the bill to incorporate a National Bank in 1815, present distinguished Senator from S. Carolina, will his recent for not signing it . It will be seen that he waives the question of the constitutionality of the measure as being precluded by saganial recognitions of the rulidity of such an institution, &c. His objections to the bill were based on other grounds, and these-being removed at the next session of Congress, he signed it authority of the Legislature to establish an incorporated bank, as being precluded in my judgment, by repeated recognitions under various eircumstances of the validity of such an institution, plicated as far back as the elbows. He had an in the acts of the legislative, executive, and judi- relakin was sloot, the materials of his inexcial branches of the Government, accompanied by indications, in different modes, of a concur. shirt was done up like lettuces. There was an rence of the general will of the nation, the proposed bank dues not appear to be calculated to answer the purposes of reviving the public evidently practised much in the "soft sawder eredit, of providing a national medium of circulation, and of aiding the Treasury by facilitating the indispensable anticipation of the revenue, and by affording to the public more durable loans.

General Washington, it is known, was President of the Convention which formed the Constitution of the United States, and a Defegate from Virginia; and it is natural to suppose that the understand meanly as well the intent and meaning of the Constitution as some of the rery enge politicians of the present day, who delare so positively and authoritively that a National Bank is unconstitutional; and yet we find his name attached to the bill chartering the yrst United States Bank and approving it. We nay be wrong, but we have always been taught to helic ve that it was safe to follow where WASH-INSTUMED, for we never understood that he was bribed to betray hie country and her interests, nor that he was pledged to follow in any other footsteps than those of duty, justice and the Con-

Preamble to the first Bank of the United States :

"Whereas It is conceived that the establishment-of-a Bank of-the United States, Dpon a toundation sufficiently extensive to answer the purposes intended thereby, and at the summe time upon the principles which afford adequate security for an upright and prudent administration thereof, will be very conducive to the successful conducting of the national finances, will tend to give facility to the obtaining of loans for the use of the government in sudden emergencles, and will be productive of considerable advantage to trade and industry in general. GEORGE WASHINGTON.

It is with inexpressible pain that we copy such statements as the following ; pain and indignation, and the deepest humiliation of sout for human depravity, and the black disgrace inflicted on our country's name. But we hold it a duty to proclaim them to the world, in the hope of that amendment for which there seems no other hope. The majesty of the law exists not in that dreadful community, where such brutal scenes are enacted; the law is powerless, and there is apparently no means of correction but in impressing upon the demoralized natures of the perpetrators, the horror and detestation with which their savage wickedness is regarded by their countrymen who blush to own the name. These enemies of the peace of society, of order, law, and civilization, dragged this respectable planter from the bosom of his family and mutillated him in the most brutal manner maining him most inhumanly, besides cutting off his nose and ears, and scarifying his body to the very libs! We believe the subject of this foul outrage still drags out a miscrable existence an object of horror and pity. I see week a club of Lynchers, amounting to four or five individuals, as we have been credibly informed, broke into the House of Mr. Scott, of Wilkinson county, a retpectable member of the bar, forced him out and hung him dead on the next tree. We have heard of numerous minor outrages committed against the peace of society and the welfare and happiness of the country; but we mention

YANKEE CLOCKMAKING OUTDONE Yestermoned before the Commissioners at the Westminster Court of Bequests, for the payment of $1.10s for a clock. Plaintiff (Mr. Farrier) was le says:

an individual of the Sam Slick species, who "Waving the question of the constitutional seemed to think that blue noses abounded in Westminster as well as in Nova Scotia. He wore a tarnation old coat, every button on which was as big as a dollar, and the sleeves were dupressibles were indescribable, the front of his arctic buld circle on his head, and on the rest the hair was cropped like a hard brush. He had and human natur;" but in the present case he had met with his match, for the defendant was a Kerry-man, a classical scholar, and moreover a policeman. Commissioner Did you get a clock from the plaintiff?

Policeman-I did.

Commissioner-And how will you pay him? Poisceman I'll never pay him, your worship The clock I have is not the clock he sold me but a substitute; and it is worth nothing. Clockmaker I sold and delivered the clock on the 4th of July, sir. It is true, I never gave him the real one, but I gave him the one he has now as a substitute, to teach him to keep time. and the way to wind up; and he was to give me a shilling a week until he paid me down 30s and then I was to take the first clock, and leave regular goer that ever 1-seed no where. Policeman Why I could never get it to go. Clockmaker Why you were always semov ng, and you make the clock go with you wirethor you had paid the rent or no '(Laughter) Policeman But it would never strike the the real one with him, which was worth ?? at least; but as for the 30s one, it was the most time punctually. Clockmaker Why, Lord bless me, -1_called three or four times as you were sitting down to your willies, auch it looked as if it had struck dinner time. (Laughter.)

Policeman That's because 'twas dinner time when you brought it, and it never stirred hand

Clock Maker Don't you remember you said you should be glad to pay a shilling a week? Policeman I did; but you forget the elliptical English I used upon that occasion that was, provided it went well, and required winding no more than twice a week. Now, I used to wind vour clock every night, and I was none the Commissioner How-used you to know when the day was approaching?

Policenian The cock used to roost over the head of my bed, sir, and used to inform myself and my wife of the fact in his native language. The clock is still sticking up right before the dresser, and if any one of you, gentlemen, or any tradesman in the street, shall say what it is worth, I will pay it on the nail, even if it were 5 shillings. The clockmaker here went into a bong speculi in praise of the unachinery of his timepiece and the painting outside of it. He was afraid that the policeman had over-wound

The police man affirmed that all winding was useless. He had the best of whipcord, but every time he would it up, the weights pulled it down again of their own accord. In fact it was only fit for the hens to roost on; or the spider to build a rookery in ; and whenever he wanted to regulate it he was obliged to look at the sun first, and then push the hour hand more or less towards the chimney. Moreuver the clock he bought and had to pay for he had never seen at all, and as for the one he had on trial the owner was welcome to fetch it away in a wheelbarrow any time he liked

The Commissioners thought the Kerryman had the best of the logic, and they decided that the plaintiff had no right to the money. He was therefore left at liberty to fetch it home in a wheelbarrow, or leave it as a keepsake with defendant, if he'thought proper --- fbondon paper.}

[From the Phila U. S Gaxette.] The following beautiful (for truth is benutiful) piece of poetry is from a daughter of Judge Lewis of Lycoming county. Our renders may not have forgotten a gem which we published a ear of two since from the father of the gifted daughter. The labors of the parent hand, it will be seen, have been liberally rewarded a bountiful harvest follows the culture of the mind. The Thought is from Mrs. Hemans- the composition original:

MUSIC AT A DEATH BED BY JULIET H. LEWIS AGED FOURTEEN YEARS

Oh! sing to me sweet sister, sing. The song I loved to hear, And when I'm gone oh sing it still And Hunk I'm lingering hore." =

Oh! let me hear before I-leave This world for yonder skies, The trembling tones of thy rich voice, On eighing suphyra rise ... Oft whilst we've watched the weary sun, Bening the inountains hide, esting his soft, and parting light On SUSQUEHANNAH'S tide.

And Standing by our mother's side, Or by our father's knee, That song has risen on the breeze;

Oh! sing it now for me-In fancy then will rise the scenes. Of my loved childhood's home;

Again I'll plack my favorite-flowers, And through my loved haunts roam, ---The forms of those in childhood dear,

Before me I shall see, nd present sorrow be forgot Then sing that song for me. The deep rich tones so sweetly rose

Upon the evening nir: They seemed to stay the hand of death. And angels lingered there.

The song now ceased the wail of grief Succeeded that sweet lay , For, with the loved and dying strains HER SPIRIT PASSED AWAY.

A HINT TO THE LADIES. Madame Dacier was desired by a German prince to write a sentence in his album, as a memorial of the visit he had paid to a woman of her great learning. She modestly wrote in it, from Euripides ·Silence is the greatest ornament of a woman.

It is with inexpressible pain that we copy such statements as the following, pain and ind gnation, and the despest-humiliation of soul for human depravity, and the black disgrace inflicted on our country's name. The majesty of the law exists not in that dreadful community, where such brutal scenes are enacted, the law is powerless, and there is apparently no means of correction but in impressing upon the demoralized natures of the perpetrators, the horror and detestation with which their sayage wickedness is regarded by their countrymen who blush to own the name [N Y Com.
